

Bringing together the different demands

There's no denying that there has been a fundamental shift in Europe, with a dramatic growth in the concentration of employment in the service sector and increased demand for Personal Protective Equipment (PPE). Garment requirements are now more fragmented, while demand for customer-specific work clothing has increased.

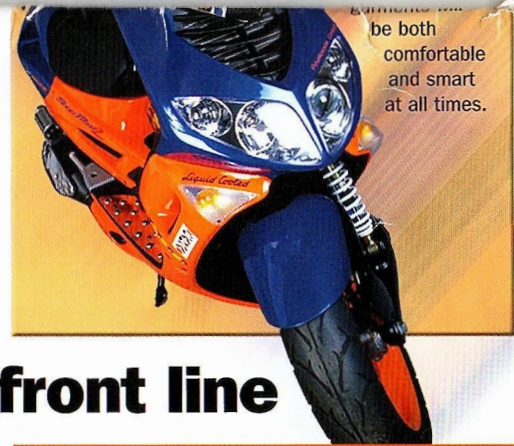

As heavy soiling has become less of a factor, the garment manufacturer, rental laundry and specifier.

Which is why Klopman has not only made extensive investments in advanced technology, but has also formed strong working relationships with customers.

This has allowed us to anticipate requirements so we can develop and supply the image workwear and specialised protective fabrics that fully meet the market's needs.

By working together we can safeguard everyone's interests, and protect the future of the European industry itself.

Garments must be both comfortable and smart at all times.

Luminex in the front line

Brought out alive after being buried for five days in the ruins of the Turkish earthquake, a four year old girl undoubtedly owes her survival to the members (both human and canine) of the Spider International Rescue Team from Hungary.

Formed in 1996, members are all volunteers and include experts from diving, mountaineering and caving associations, as well as ambulance and civil defence personnel.

Providing their own dogs and equipment, the team has played a vital role in over 200 rescues in Hungary as well as helping at recent disasters in Italy, Columbia, Turkey, Taiwan, Ecuador and India.

In the horror and turmoil of a disaster, visibility and ease of identification of personnel as well as protection are extremely important considerations.

To ensure that they are instantly recognisable as well as thoroughly protected, leading Hungarian garment manufacturer Lola has provided the team with striking coveralls in Klopman's Luminex. Complete with the logos of their sponsors, the coveralls help the team to continue to provide an invaluable humanitarian service.

Michelin

Smart

Plus a new